

THE CORE OF “BEING” TRANSFORMATIVE!

What can the “I” express to family and friends when a “Matriarch” of the “Indigenous African Ark” is ceded to the Ancestors on Wednesday April 3, 2024 – The said day in 1984 John Thompson of Georgetown University is the first African American to win an NCAA Basketball Tournament Death unravels the mind and soul – a gruesome reality – morbid... It can push the envelope... It can create and generate an upsurge of conflicts, turmoil and hope for the common good or divide... It reverberates and defines ... Subtly – succinctly – dying and death leaves the phenomena of hope, resurrection, everlasting life, harmony, fervor and good will – A resolve of unity, mutual respect, thanksgiving and gratitude!

Cousin Enid “Beryl” Wilman Bathersfield is the core of “Being” transformative – her spirit is eternal ... So remember her, how you can. Her stature, her wisdom, her dominance, her vision, her perceptiveness, her forthrightness, her business acumen, her culinary skills, her matriarchal nurturing innate skills – Ingenious... Remember her – how you can... Even though you did not agree with her... She lived her dream, her plans, her desires, her wishes and her secrecy! Remember her – how you can ...She loved her family, she loved life, living and giving. Remember her – how you can ...She endureth, endureth...

Peace be strong! Do not weep – she wept! Remember her – The Core of “Being” Transformative!
